

About the Author

Ron Ramsay is a retired minister of the Uniting Church in Australia. He currently lives in Mansfield, Brisbane with his wife, Shirley. Among his varied qualifications, he has a Diploma in Education, a Bachelor of Divinity and a Master of Literary Studies majoring in world religions.

He has written and published three other books. One is 'Tam-pa's Tall Tales', a devotional book of animal stories for children based on his own amazing experiences relating to creatures of all kinds and sizes, from elephants to spiders.

The second, 'Through a Glass Darkly', is the story of his own search for a way to reconcile the personal God of theism with the Impersonal Absolute of mysticism and to build a bridge between 'Eastern' and 'Western' religious traditions.

The third, 'Hell, Hope and Heroes', is a book about life in the Field Ambulance in World War I based on his father's diary and memoirs - a poignant tale of courage, heroism and death.

He has written this book, 'A Lodging along the Way' for anyone interested in life after death but especially those who have had Paranormal experiences and are trying to reconcile those experiences with their religious beliefs or upbringing.
